

Spice of Life

Take a scenic drive up through the hinterland to Tamborine Mountain, detour passed the “Tourist Central” and make your way to the locals end of town where the action is and you will stumble across a delightful café called the Spice Of Life Café and Deli. The historic building has transformed from a grocers and general store in the 1930’s to this exciting modern multicultural café.

The atmosphere is pleasantly busy and upbeat with local chit chat, where the staff mingle frequently with the loyal customers who pop in for their daily cuppa before running off to work. The aroma of ground coffee beans and freshly baked muffins is enough to tantalise anyone’s tastebuds.

Among the customers you may stumble across an eccentric, but very welcoming Dutchman who owns the café. He often makes his rounds through the café making everyone feel welcome, always willing to do his best to make you feel like a treasured guest of his. But to make this partnership complete is his partner. A German spoken lady who seems to linger in the back ground baking all the magnificent home made delights in the cake cabinet. Breaky is served daily from 7 till 12 from their menu and when 12 o’clock comes round it’s a great variety of tastes to choose from till 9pm. From Tandoori chicken Wraps to Vindaloo curry it is definitely the Spices of Life.

While waiting for your meal there is plenty to see in their delicatessen section of assorted jams, chutneys, chocolate and plenty of gift ideas. So next time our taking a trip through the mountains, drop into the Spice of Life for a treat.

Written by

Inka Edrich

Mental health recovery program & Heads Up project worker

Robina Office